

Faith ranks right up there with love in being the most fundamental of Christian duties. Without it, we will not get anywhere in life or with God. This morning, I want to pursue some thoughts on why people are inconsistent with their faith. Study with me and then come back tonight for a lesson from bro. Keele for our youth service and graduation honoring afterward.

Tonight. If you have not yet brought any ice cream or bananas for the ice cream social honoring the graduates, then please remember to do that. We have toppings, we mainly need the ice cream, bananas, cookies, etc. If you have anything for a graduate, then there will be a place to put it in the fellowship hall. If you have a name we don't have, then put it on the list!

I.

II. 15 Things What I Wish I Knew as a High School Senior

At the age of 17, I graduated High School and found myself with a little knowledge, a nice piece of paper reading High School Diploma, an acceptance letter to college and a dream of sleeping the summer away. There are a few things I wish I would have known then. Being 24 years later, I thought I would share them with you.

1. Live what is right.
2. Debt stinks!
3. Work like you mean it.
4. Present choices determine future results.
5. Friends come and go, but you have to live with yourself forever.
6. Your parents do know what they are talking about.
7. The job at Burger King stinks now, but you are developing a work ethic.
8. Golf is better when you are young.
9. Get a Mutual Fund fast.

10. Keep a journal.
11. God is really in control.
12. You have no idea what you will do with your life, so get more skills.
13. Knowing how to work on your own car is a good thing.
14. Read on leadership, finance and personal development.
15. Eat more ice cream when you are young.

-- Christopher Gallagher
